PADECO

Message from the President

The importance of infrastructure—including both "hard" infrastructure such as physical facilities and "soft" infrastructure related to institutions and policies—is well recognized.

As a development consulting firm, PADECO has been providing its services to develop such infrastructure, hard and soft, over the last three decades.

We have carried out projects and programs across a wide range of sectors, including transport, urban and regional development, education and human resources development, industrial and institutional management, information technology, and the environment and climate change.

PADECO is an international consulting firm with multinational staff and a worldwide network of offices providing professional services from conception to completion.

We combine extensive experience, technical and managerial skills, and versatility to provide the best solution to any need of our clients.

Welcome to PADECO and we look forward to working with you.

Our Approach

A Multidisciplinary and Multicultural Background

While an individual is capable of providing results, the results of a team of capable multidisciplinary individuals are far beyond the sum of what each can provide. Our multicultural international staff strive to satisfy clients by not only relying on their specialties and backgrounds but also those of others in the world whenever appropriate. Our open culture encourages staff to seek answers in order to leverage the knowledge of our entire organization and beyond.

Pursuing Professional Answers Applicable in Particular Environments

Diverse projects call for creative solutions. Our client-focused and open attitude breeds flexible solutions in addressing today's most challenging problems by providing professional answers that are of universal excellence applicable to particular environments.
